

ASFIRJ Thanks 2024 Reviewers!

Peer review is a cardinal part of the scientific publishing process. It remains the most important part of quality control for any scientific journal. Reviewers serve as an important source of feedback, which help authors to improve the quality of their papers before they are published. It is not an exaggeration to say that no scientific journal can exist without peer reviewers!

Following its launch in June 2024, ASFIRJ processed over 80 submissions by the end of 2024, of which several were published. Processing those papers were facilitated by our dedicated reviewers. Each of the reviewers likely spent several hours in reviewing the papers assigned to them, a service for which they receive no compensation.

On behalf of the editorial board of ASFIRJ, I would like to appreciate the time, efforts, and dedication of all the reviewers who helped us to process the submitted papers and to reach fair decisions on each of them. We thank you for your dedicated feedback and are grateful for the valuable improvements your comments brought to each paper that was eventually published.

For all you helped us achieve in 2024, we say, Thank You. We are confident that you will continue to support the journal as we grow and make more impact to the scientific publishing landscape in Africa.
